The mere fact that the agreed delivery period is exceeded shall not cause the supplier to be in default. This shall be the case only if the supplier still fails to deliver within an additional, reasonable period stated to him in writing after the expiry of agreed delivery period due to reasons that are imputable to the supplier.

the buyer may cancel the agreement of a failure to deliver in time that is imputable to the supplier and causes him to be in default pursuant to the provisions of article 5.2 only to the extent that the agreement has not been performed yet and to the extent that the buyer cannot in reason be expected to let the unperformed part of the agreement stand.

The Buyer shall be obliged to provide full cooperation as requested in this connection, on pain of forfeiting all his rights in connection with the defect. The supplier is not obliged to take back defective goods, but if so requested the buyer shall immediately put any goods that have been replaced at the suppliers disposal.
